Miami Beach, Fla.—Announcement of the government's shipping policy will not be made until after President Harding goes to Washington. Reports that the president might make known his plans while on his vacation trip have grown out of the fact that one of his companions here is Chairman Alben W. Barkley of the United States shipping board. But while it is true that a program could be agreed upon and made public if the president were disposed to tackle the subject now, the desire of Mr. Harding is to deliberate further and take up the whole problem in detail immediately on his arrival in the national capital.

The president has, of course, been thinking a good deal about the ships' financing situation as a consequence of the failure of the ship subsidy bill. There are three courses of action open to him:

First, to sell the ships at whatever

HE LEADS FAMOUS CHOIR WHICH IS NEVER GIVEN PITCHMiss Janesville Says

An indignant traveler called the Gazette Thursday morning to report that Beloit has cleaned the Janesville-Beloit concrete road Tuesday as far as the Town line bridge. "What's the matter with Janesville?" he asked.

Gales for men in ordinary weather are tame, and when a special occasion, such as the various and repeated storms of the past week, arises, it is time for something more. A number of the boys was the answer and on Monday there were seen on a high school pupil—it was only coincidence that he had been the first to don Valentine trousers. "Those tops" have become the thing at school now, but these were regular rubber zip boots.

Milton Avenue users of the street car lines will hold a meeting in a taxi cab and see if the company will pay interest on the Chinese checks they have been holding for a week.

Possibly a city manager would permit it and possibly he would not—the loading of snow on the Milwaukee street bridge to be carried down stream and dumped in the river, a few blocks away.

I have seen more hot-sodded in the last week than in ten years in Janesville.

I notice that the hotel business is picking up and that travelers are numerous in the last few weeks.

The former with his bobs is the salvation for the Milton avenue pedestrian. George Muller, route 8, carried 11 men and women downtown Saturday morning, picking them up in every block. No one hesitates to catch a hot these days.

The long shore is over between the weather and the galosh and weather, as in everything, has won out. The galosh is shot, punctured in the heel. It might have been a victory for the overshoes if the barrage of the last week had been withheld. One does hate to buy another pair of galoshes so late in the season, but then one can never tell how long the season will continue.

A string quartet is to give a number ride up Milton avenue on the Fourth of July.

paid in Chicago, and what a tremendous success this play has been. Janeville is fortunate in securing it on this tour, when it is playing only the chief theaters in the country.

The cast includes Jefferson, in the east, many notables, among them Jessie Bacon, daughter of the famous Frank Bacon, who wrote the play and died when at the height of his glory in playing the main role, a sister of the scenes at a fashionable Parisian watering-place, now in apartments in New York. Gloria has all the advantages for appearing at her best, and seldom has she been more decorated or decorative than in this picture.

In a few scenes of this gorgeous production, Gloria leaves her much-bedecked gown to appear in a simple, light-colored, silken thing suitable with the fashionable Deauville as a background. These scenes were naturally taken at this spot, and many wealthy and fashionable ladies come to pose in them.

However, the picture is not all frothy, and does not rely for its value on scene after scene of gorgeousness. It is a drama, and has a good plot, but has a real plot taken from the novel of the same name written by David Lisle and first published in 1916 when it created a great stir in this country. It is the part Gloria plays in this story, and Gloria plays the part of Betty Bellew, whose love for her husband had left her when he was married to a brute to save her father, as a vehicle for such stars as Irving Cummings, Eva Novak and Wallace Beery, who have the leading parts.

The Mounted Police, ever-popular, enter the picture and their ideals and qualities of heart have given them a decided popularity, and are brought out by the hero, who returns from a trip into the north to find his sweetheart married to a villain, all to save her from the villain. The picture is well calculated in the picture, and scenery is especially good, having been taken in the Yosemite.

AT THE APOLLO.
The announcement of the approach of a Winninger company to the city always creates a great deal of interest and the visits of Frank and his company are looked forward to from announced through his press agent just what players will be with him. It has been reported his picture to have a company of the best caliber.

Mme. Vogue Sets the Fashion

Not for several years have there been as many clearly defined silhouettes for spring, silhouettes that differ so radically that there is no meeting-place save in their common enthusiasm for the flat back—the latest back we have seen for some time. The reason for the variety is curious, for part of it is that there are so many really great creators at work, each earnestly striving for individuality; in part, too, that the modern woman has seen the necessary inspiration for the silhouette numbered four, associated in one's mind with Cherut, who originated its present form. Long and straight from the shoulder to the knee flaring from there (or point above), some of the models are flounced all around, some in front only, and some in back.

The Straight Line Is Still Good
Cherut is one of those creators whose influence on the mode is enormous. Simplicity and youthfulness are her watchwords; the straight line is her medium of expression. The silhouette dictated by her is illustrated by drawing number two, with its straight line and its semi-low waist-line, is very often seen in day-time dresses.

Last of all, for frocks that live under the lights of night, there is Larvin's pet creation, the robe de style. Few women wear it, but those who do continue to be enthusiastic about it. It has most distinctive qualities.

Sketches for silhouettes seen in street costumes are worn at the graceful length of from eight to ten inches from the ground.

The Wars of the Three-Piece Suit

According to late news from the Paris office of Vogue, three-piece suits, around which the mode for the street was built, are more versatile than ever before. There are the tailored dress and coat model and the skirt-blouse-and-coat costume, of equal importance. The length of the coat is varied in three ways, and every way produces a slightly different effect, though in the main a simple silhouette. There are three points, however, on which all three-piece suits are adamant. Skirts must be from eight to ten inches from the floor. Whether pleated, or tiered, or plain, they must always give an effect of slenderness. And every back must be as flat as it possibly can be.

The coat which is seen the oftenand is not for the mature woman. Last of all—hardly to be called mode because it is so beautifully conventional that with slight variations, it is always appropriate—there is the severely tailored suit, the type made famous by the O'Regans. This year's model is devolved in grey or brown, not curved at the waist-line, and without godets. It is short, straight, unbelted, and fastened with three or four buttons. A bandanna handkerchief is sometimes knotted over the shoulder in some of these dresses.

The coat which is seen the often-place of a fur piece. Vogue suggests an initiated white crepe blouse to be worn with such a suit, and for the woman to whom this costume is becoming, nothing else quite has quite the same distinction.

The New Coat Dress

The new coat-dress of gabardine, rep, or wool poplin has the added touch so appropriate to the morning touch of the season, and it has the added attraction of being made in several different silhouettes—either with circular godets, or narrow and plain. Such dresses are short (eight or ten inches from the ground), simple, and trimmings, except for touches of sash, lingerie collar and cuffs, a bit of brilliant material. Sleeves are mostly long-tucked and trimmed at the wrist. Neck-lines are either batiste or square, while occasionally a pointed decolletage is in evidence.

For the afternoon, Vogue has received an interesting telegram from Paris concerning the revival of the chambonette, which, indeed, makes an ideal background for the embroidery drawn from peasant sources as well as from intricate museum pieces. Embroideries will have an immense vogue, not only for the straight dresses, but for others that are more or less simple in construction. Afternoon dresses are either very short, very long, or knee-length, and trimmings at the waist are either batiste or square, while occasionally a pointed decolletage is in evidence.

Chambray Tunics and Panchis

If the Chambray dress and the coat-in-front silhouette are not becoming, one still has a wide choice. There is the godet frock with interesting circular panels set in at the sides or at one side, where it is gathered into a great curve.

The draped dress is shown occasionally. The tunic or panchi dress is also spoken of, especially with the woollen fabric, which is combined with one of the new printed crepes.

Here and there, of course, one sees a dress that fails to classify according to any of the recognized silhouettes, preferring to depend on a certain way of ornamentation than by actual cutting of the lines.

The normal line is returning cautiously, but rather by means of suggestion in the way of ornament than by actual cutting of the lines.

HARNESSING THE COLORADO

155 FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Washington.—A vast reclamation project which contemplates the subjugation of the Colorado, that wild and turbulent river so fraught with possibilities for good and evil, has been brought to a stage where its realization is no longer a dream of empire builders. It involves concerted action on the part of seven states and the federal government. It promises new farm homes for 3,000,000 people within the next few years and a tremendous industrial development based on the utilization of part or all of 6,000,000 horsepower of electric energy. It is so big that compared with it the construction of the Panama canal might be called a minor enterprise and the Suez canal a mere ditch between two oceans.

Seven states, Arizona, California, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming, created a commission, with Herbert Hoover as the guiding spirit, which worked out an agreement or a treaty which requires merely the approval of Congress to become effective after it is ratified by the legislatures of the several states. An initial appropriation of $70,000,000 is asked to launch the undertaking, but this is but a comparatively small part of the sum that will be expended eventually.

Fifty millions will be spent first in the construction of a dam at Boulder Canyon, which will put an end to the disastrous floods of the Colorado, and at the same time provide irrigation for 1,000,000 acres of what are now desert lands. The remaining $20,000,000 of the first appropriation will be devoted to a canal which is needed to furnish water to the Imperial Valley, by an all-American States route instead of one that passes partly through Mexican territory, as at present.

The United States will be reimbursed for the entire cost of the project, it is claimed, within a period of 40 years through funds derived from the sale of power and fees for water supplied for irrigation purposes.

Saint Patrick's Day in the Morning.

On this day one cannot escape the influence of St. Patrick's Day. It is as inescapable as is the 17th of March on the calendar. On that day one unconsciously and naturally turns his thoughts to Ireland. It is Erin's day. There comes a vision of an untrained people and a visitor, a priest, bringing the message of peace on earth and love and hope to follow. And from that day to this Erin has been a land of romance, of poetry, of tales of war and tumult and revolution, of pain and sorrow, of light heart and heavy—of all the human gamut of emotions, Ireland has been wanting in none.

Her hero tales and her legends are as beautiful as any in all the chronicles of ancient peoples. Her scintillating wit is proverbial. Bayonets and cannon, armed men and fortified castle, starvation and death, threats and executions, left a nation still undaunted. America was a great boon to the Irishman in those days of English rack-rents and eviction. The absentee landlord was a sworn enemy who lived only because he was parasite. A flood of immigrants came to the land of liberty and promise. From 1850 to 1850 there was no steamship that did not bear its quota of men and women and children from Ireland. They were immediately assimilated. They became a part of America in all that was America's. They might wear the shamrock and remember the flag with the harp of gold, but the stars and stripes were theirs. There was no absentee landlord to add fear of injustice to the misery of tenancy. There was no armed constabulary to sweep suddenly upon a cabin and carry away some youth who had sung a song of Irish freedom or boasted that he knew Robert Emmet.

America too aided Ireland to keep up the fight for a separate existence. Amid the rejoicing that a Free State had finally been accomplished as a political fact comes the daily sorrow over a continuation of local warfare. Such a condition cannot go on forever without entire destruction and no man could wish that fate for Ireland or her people. Ancient Iberia came into her own with the arrival of St. Patrick. Her history began then. There is need now of another St. Patrick to plead for a united Ireland, and a cessation of the blood and slaughter and destruction of property. To the United States no day will be brighter and no event loom larger than when there is a stable government in Ireland, made by and supported by the Irish people, and peace reigns from Bantry Bay to Ballybunion.

Governor Blaine Taking the Right Course

Governor Blaine is taking the right course in making a tax bill. First he let Mr. Dahl and Mr. Severson know that neither of the bills favored by these members of the legislature were at all satisfactory to him. The governor had been reading and hearing what the people had to say. Mr. Severson admitted that some changes would be made in his bill lowering the tax rate one-half.

This naturally was a recognition that the complaints filed had some weight and that the rate was not only too high but was endangering the state's position in industry. The governor has gone farther. He realizes that a radical and unjust bill raising revenue for the state will result in a reaction from which it will take years to recover. The determination of the governor is also less pleasing to the tax commission chairman, Mr. Rosa, than to the members of the assembly and senate who have been bucking Rosa's bill against the governor's wishes. It will take many weeks to solve the tax question satisfactorily even for this session. It probably will never be solved to the entire satisfaction of all interests but inequalities and class arrangement can be eliminated and a measure in keeping with the needs of the state be adopted. The state will be behind the governor in his effort to make such a bill.

Mr. Severson will change his tax bill and cut some of the rates. Mr. Severson leaves some of those who said the rates were right and correct in a predicament.

JUST FOLKS

BY EDGAR A. GUEST

THE COMMON TIES.

This old world, and I've been around it North and south and east and west, Seems to me, for so I've found it, Mighty fine and richly blessed; Everywhere you'll find a steeple, Symbolizing faithful people.

Most folks, when you learn about 'em, Think just and just like your own; Strange strangers you may doubt 'em, Temporaries, transient ones, You'll discover in their hours, They're just like your friends, and neighbors, Riches, poverty and sadness, Pride and blemishes are there, There's the self-same smile of gladness, Self-same sorrow everywhere.

Strange the country you are treading?

Laughter rings at every wedding.

Find the mother with her baby, Just the same as every mother, Distant though the country may be, Mothers are just like each other, And the little ones in Norway Act like those around your doorway.

Custom's but an outer garment, Life goes on from day to day, She demands its cruel payment, Wherever you may stay, Honor, virtue, faith and pity, Dwell in every town and city.

What we think is fair they treasure,

What we mourn they also mourn,

Brothers all of grief and pleasure,

Wherever men are born,

People everywhere you find them,

Have these common ties to bind them.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHATERS.

Tanderia Nicholson is so painfully shy that when she meets new people she can't even tell what to do with her hands or feet. She lives as a poor relation with her Aunt Maude, her uncle, and his wife, and their daughter Gladys, all of whom frequently tell her that she is hopelessly stupid and queer. She has only one friend, Morton, who is hopelessly heartbroken.

She goes to New York to live with Gloria Gates, a brilliant, erratic woman, whose little son, Frankie, she takes care of. Among kindred spirits she begins to find herself. She finds she really cares for Gloria's friend, George, who goes with them that summer to Europe. But when Gloria, now a widow, marries Stan Gloria, now a widow, leaves Pan in charge of Frankie. George, who has been in France, returns to London. He says he has always been in love with Pan.

PREPARATIONS

Chapter 98

George complained as they walked back to the hotel: "I feel as though someone had clapped you away from me. Pan. It was all so nice, I was having everything quiet and done in my own way."

"And now Mrs. Clarke has spoiled it," said Pan, laughing a little. "Do you mind? Oh, means well." "They always do," George groaned.

"I know," the girl interrupted, "you feel as though you were marrying a ready-made family, a wife, a child, and a mother-in-law, too."

"Exactly! Well, don't take too much time buying your wedding dress and whatever else she insists on, and then we'll have it over and slip off somewhere by ourselves. What shall I do?"

He named places that sounded alluring to her—cathedral town with nothing but quaint houses leaning over crooked little streets, and a big inn where post horses used to stop, a seaside hotel with great rolling hills behind, where there are "fairy rings" of green grass and fat flocks of sheep in clouds of sheepish-looking smoke and smoke, a place high in the Scottic mountains where the shadows lay blue and brown over heather covered country and the air was like cool wine—

"They sound lovely, I couldn't choose," Pan said finally.

"Doesn't all this make you anxious to run away and marry me?" George asked with a smile.

"Yes," the girl answered, "if I don't seem to care, it's because I'm so perfectly happy as it is."

"Perfectly happy?"

"Yes. I can't imagine being happy."

George carried away that sentence as his last impression of his fiancee. He was banished for the rest of the day for Mrs. Clarke had not come for him, she told George smugly.

So George wandered into his club, read newspapers and played a game of billiards, dined and went with a couple of friends to a show he didn't in the least want to see—and back to his club again. There he sat for a long time in one of the great leather chairs, long legs stretched straight out, cigarette limply in his fingers—and meditated with some amusement on the weak-

MRS. COFFMAN ILL SEVEN YEARS

Saved from an Operation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sidell, Ill.—"I was a nervous wreck. I was suffering from a pain in my left side, which was almost unbearable, and I could not even let the bed clothing rest on my body at night. I had been sick for seven years, but not so bad until the last eighteen months, and had become so run down that I cared no more for myself, and would rather have died than live, could not do my work without help, and the doctors told me that an operation was all that was left. I would not consent to that, so my husband bought me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and begged me to take it. I have taken four bottles of it and feel ten years younger. Life is full of hope, do all my house work and have a large garden this year. I never will be without help."

SUGGESTIONS

Clean Bath Tub.—To clean a bath tub withing with water. Rub it over the bath, rinse out thoroughly with warm water. Dry with a clean cloth.

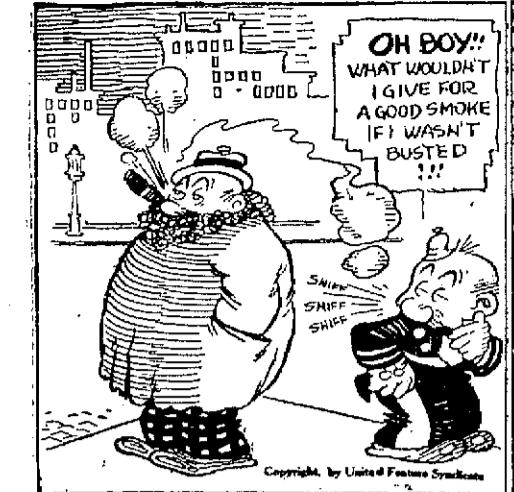

Areas for House Dress—In purchasing material for a house dress, buy one yard more than required. From this make an apron, which is not only inconspicuous but insures service for the dress, since it saves many laundries.

Glass Cleaning—When your glass cooking utensils are badly stained, boil them over the stove, then clean them with steel wool. A small portion moistened with water and dipped into a little scouring powder will do wonders.

I would like to know if I should still keep company with him. He is not a man, I would like to marry.

He still corresponds with me, but I don't answer his letters, but still he writes. What shall I do? He seems to be a nice fellow, but everybody thinks he is a fool. He has a steady job. He lives about 20 miles from me and comes to see me. Should I let him come?

There is another fellow I like better. He is 20 years of age. I would much rather go with him. He is a good sensible fellow and I always have a good time with him. Would you advise me to go with this one?

Fortunately antisепtic cleanliness is becoming a fad, but even so most barbers carry their comb and brush in their pocket and use it impartially on each successive customer, so that one man's germ becomes the next man's property. It is so easy for a man to shampoo his own hair that I would advise him to do it always at home, and when he does go to a barber, he should take a bath before he goes.

FINANCIAL AND BUSINESS NEWS

Main Tendency of Stocks Is Upward; Industrials Lead

[FOR ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York.—(Weekly) Financial Review.—Despite an intermittent profit-taking and short selling in various sections of the list, the main price tendency in this week's stock market continued upward with the industrial averages again getting into new high ground. Railroad averages showed little change, although they enjoyed a brief period of mid-week activity and strength in large response to a combination of large car loads. While pools were again the dominating factor in the determination of quoted values, an enlarged public demand was indicated by the unusually large increase in odd lot transactions.

Equipment and sugars developed impressive strength, virtually all the active issues in those groups establishing new high prices for the year. Equipment benefited by the heavy railroad activity of rolling stock and the establishment of a new high price for Cuban raw sugar and a heavy buying of that product by British and French importers revived speculative interest in that group.

Motor, motor accessories, shipping, food, merchandising and some of the public utility and oil issues also were heavily bought at various intervals but they developed considerable irregularity in the closing days of the week. Metal shares made a moderate response to reports of unusually heavy copper shipments abroad at prices as high as 17 1/4 cents a pound and the price of the American Zinc institute showing surplus stocks or 10,854 tons at the end of February as against 64,124 tons at the corresponding period last year. February consumption exceeded production by 5,710 tons and the price of the metal advanced to 7 7/8 a pound, the highest since August 1920.

Louisville and Nashville railroad directors declared a stock dividend of 12 1/2 percent and an annual cash dividend of 2 1/2 percent on the new stock, equivalent to an annual rate of 8 1/8 on the old, which had been paying seven percent. The Magnolia Petroleum rate was raised from $4 to $5 and payments on Sloss Sheffield and Warren Brothers were resumed. The New York Central directors deferred action for one month owing to the absence of a quorum.

The sharp recovery in French exchange which got above 6.30 cents for the first time in nearly two months was predicted on reports that negotiations between the French and the Germans for the settlement of the Ruhr controversy would be instituted in the near future. The sterling rate dropped in reflection of the unusually large volume of bids against grain, cotton, sugar and copper, etc., and the payment of more than $4,000,000 to the United States as interest on the war debt. Canadian exchange also was a conspicuous feature.

Better business conditions throughout the State are evidenced by gains in volume of rail traffic, traffic.

A shortage of building labor is developing generally in spite of the fact that a large number of Negroes are arriving daily from southern states. They are coming appreciable to Illinois, and yet there is no noticeable surplus of common labor in any district. There is a greater activity in cotton manufacturing than at any previous time in the history of the industry."

A dwindling roll of unemployed, with mining, lumber and other trade indices picking up is reported. To California and other states that section of the country.

California and other Pacific coast states are said to be enjoying the return of prosperity. Optiistic reports were also received from the southern states.

Raw Cotton Rise Forces Cloths Steadily Higher

New Bedford, Mass.—With raw material prices soaring to new high levels, the primary cotton goods markets continued to climb last week despite the attempts of the sellers to keep the dealing within conservative limits.

With the trade facing an imminent shortage in the raw-cotton supply, it seems to be no limit where cotton prices may go and each new advance in the raw material markets is followed by proportionate marking up of gray-goods prices, since the mills are loath to sell except on a replacement-price basis as to raw material.

Experienced operators are shaking their heads with foreboding as the price levels mount higher and higher. With October futures ready, selling is still on, but under May 12 1/2 cents under July, many are asking what is going to happen to the present gray-goods price levels when the new crop months arrive and futures drop 4 or 5 cents a pound or more.

Hill selling agents have this situation strongly in mind and see in it the practical certainty of heavy cancellations of orders on which deliveries may be due to the fall.

For persons who are discouraging long future contracts and confusing their sales, as much as possible to nearby deliveries.

The sensitiveness of the market and the fact that considerable goods is in rather weak hands was brought out on each occasion last week when the future markets took a dip. Every reaction brought out a fair volume of secondhand offerings, and though there is no permanent sufficient outlet for heavy goods to afford a quick outlet for such offerings, and they were quickly absorbed when the future market showed a resumption of strength, they serve as danger signals to warn traders and producers that all are trading on very thin ice.

There is a shortage of the crop of peanuts and because of it the

1923 Industrial Prospects Bright, Says U.S. Review

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington.—"Unemployment is diminishing and industrial prospects for 1923 are very bright," summarizes the business situation in Massachusetts according to the review of conditions there issued yesterday by the employment service of the United States Department of Labor.

This summary might be applied to the entire country, for the survey of conditions in each state shows business on the up-grade, with many factories working overtime, less unemployment, and "good times" prevailing generally.

The textile industry in Massachusetts is said to be operating at capacity, with many mills on an over-

A New Home!

What feeling of happiness there is in that statement. What feeling of pride and pleasure creeps over you when you can say you OWN YOUR HOME.

Systematic saving will make that new home possible.

Investing a regular amount every month in the Janesville Building and Loan Association is a very satisfactory way to pile up a nice sum through savings and a generous rate of interest.

$5.00 per month saved with this association for approximately eighty-four months will amount to $500.

Let us explain this modern saving method.

These First Mortgage 5% Gold Bonds, "E," due March 1, 1963, are, in our opinion, a very conservative investment. Price 90 and interest, to yield 5.63%.

Ohio Public Service Company First Mortgage and Refunding 6% Gold Bonds, due March 1, 1953, at 97.29 and interest, afford a long time 6% coupon bond, to yield 6.20%.

Where Is My Income? Spent!

He did not intend to use other than good judgment, this man who at 45 had invested of his success in good bonds and set them aside to protect his wife and two children in case of need.

But he had always asked the bank to clip the coupons and credit the income to his checking account. It was the easy thing to do and he had never considered it was unfair to his family.

But at 61 it seemed wise to consult his attorney or other business advisor and check over his estate. Try as he might his advisor could not keep from asking the question, "Where is the income?" and the man, now old, answered, "Spent!"

If that income had been invested regularly under my "New Savings Plan for Improving your Estate" it would have increased by about 150%. It would have been charged with the minimum of income tax. It would have operated automatically in securing the maximum safe protection, payable monthly or otherwise to the heirs.

This plan, "Life Insurance and Bonds," is of increasing importance to men and women of affairs. May I not call and explain more fully or will you not call at my office?

JOHN W. DADY

S.W. Milwaukee Street.

For detailed information regarding these bonds, attention is directed to a letter of Mr. A. M. Lyon, President of the Company, from which the following is summarized:

West Penn Power Company supplies electricity for light, heat and power purposes in 373 cities, towns and communities located in the Pittsburgh district of Pennsylvania, at distances of from three to sixty miles from that city. The population of all communities served is approximately 500,000, while the chartered territory exceeds 5,000 square miles.

The territory served by the Company is considered one of the best fields for power consumption in the United States, the industries served being of a very widely diversified character.

These bonds, in the opinion of counsel, are secured by a first mortgage on all the physical property, rights and franchises now owned by West Penn Power Company.

The replacement value of the Company's property, as determined by examining engineers, based on pre-war prices, plus expenditures for subsequent additions and betterments, is largely in excess of the First Mortgage Bonds outstanding.

Gross earnings for the year ended January 31, 1923, were $10,508,389. During the same period, net earnings amounted to $3,961,210, as compared with annual interest requirements on the outstanding First Mortgage Bonds of $1,464,080.

BOND DEPARTMENT

$585 in Burned Bills Redeemed

STORIA, Okla., Feb. 26.—A safe found in the corner of his safe—roll of currency aggregating $500 following the recent conflagration here—brought the Government. He was ready to throw them away when a safe expert advised him to send the notes to the Treasury Department. Federal experts identified all but three $5 bills and asked if he would be willing to contribute on a basis of $585. He very willingly agreed.

Fire Has No Respect for Money

There is not very much to add to the above news story—except to further emphasize the wisdom of putting accumulated money beyond the ravages of fire or the clammy hand of a thief—like it would be if deposited with us.

We'll be responsible for your savings, whether the amount is six hundred or six dollars.

An old safe won't pay you interest—we will.

LITTLE TALKS ON BANKING

Stocks, Bonds, Investments-- Oil and Otherwise

Did you know it was possible for your banker to save you hundreds, perhaps thousands, of dollars by simply consulting with him?

You have many opportunities if you have a little surplus money of spending it for this or that to put it in an investment which promises to pay 10% or 25% or even 100%, according to the statements of the man attempting to sell the stocks to you and how gullible he really thinks you are.

LATEST MARKET REPORT

GRAIN

Weekly Grain Review. Chicago—European demand for wheat in the past few days tended to lift the value of grain markets with wheat, the price average higher than a week ago. The wheat market of the greater part of the week moved within narrow limits. Wheat delivered at the range of $1.85 to $1.90 per bushel, the bulk of trading between $1.90 to $1.20. Compared with a week ago, wheat prices Saturday morning showed a slight decline in corn, while oats were up. Corn was up 10¢ to 12¢ a bushel, and provisions ranged from 2¢ decline to 3¢ advance.

Within the last week there has been considerable demand from across the Atlantic for cash wheat, with probably 5,000,000 bushels of North American taken in the last of this grain and a portion of it, which is now on ocean passage, has been placed. Stocks of wheat here, it was said, are far from large enough to hedge business. Reserve supplies of European countries were said to have been greatly depleted, and the sudden demand from there is not causing any great surprise.

General rains or snows fell over sections of winter wheat territory. The past week in Kansas getting a little rain did not affect the market to any extent.

Corn and oats have been rather dull of late. Selling orders of corn were brought out on the butchers' market, progressive buying on resting orders came to a halt on the breaks. Cars have been reported scarce at the interior points, making a slight dent.

A market for a stock of land and buildings with a strong European demand, gave firmness to provisions.

Chicago Review. Chicago—European demand for wheat, corn and oats values have started upward during the early dealings. Strength in Liverpool was reflected on this side of the Atlantic. At the start, however, a fair number of foreigners, who bought May, July and September, partly direct cables. Some scattered commission house buying showed some light on the breaks. Cars have been reported scarce at the interior points, making a slight dent.

PROVISIONS

Weekly Butter Market. Chicago—Decreased receipts caused the butter market to advance slightly, the market ending with the four principal markets showing gains from one to two cents, the United States Bureau of Agriculture Economic Research Service.

Unloading of a cargo of New Zealand butter at New York during the previous week and the rapid approach of new producing season caused the market to drop. Rumors that part of the import stock had been sold to Canadian buyers were not definitely established until late in the day.

The possibility of a sharp increase in domestic production still hung over the market. Shortage of butter and cheese was still top score, and a corresponding narrow range between scores persisted. The shortage of undergrated was not materialized by the arrival of 2,000 boxes of Argentine stock at New York last Tuesday.

Closing quotation ranges for the week at four principal butter markets were as follows:

Chicago, 50¢, 2 point gain; Boston, 50¢, 1½ point gain; Baltimore, 50¢, 1 point gain; Philadelphia, 50¢, 1 point gain.

Chicago. Butter: Unchanged; receipts 5,144 tubs.

Beef: Lovers: receipts 19,000 cases; flats 23 to 23 1/2¢; ordinary flats 24 to 24 1/2¢; miscellaneous 24 1/2 to 25¢.

Poultry—Live: Unchanged.

Miss M. A. Brooks, Lake Beulah, is visiting at the home of her sister, Mrs. Will Cobb.

Mrs. J. W. Leonard, East Troy, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Thomas Costello.

Mrs. W. M. Fosel, Kenosha, returned to her home Wednesday after spending a week with her mother, who has been ill.

Mrs. D. F. Kellher was called to Black Earth, Wednesday, by the illness of her father, Mr. Field.

Walter West has returned from Chicago.

In Elkhorn Churches

Baptist church, Ralph Mayo, pastor. Church school at 10; morning worship at 11; sermon subject: "Cross Bearing," B. Y. P. U. at 6:30; topic: "Factors for Making the World Better." Leaders, Alvin Mayo, Ora McCarthy and Mrs. Mayo.

Methodist church—There will be services at 2 Sunday.

Elkhorn—Harold Optiz has resigned as city treasurer and the vacancy will be filled at the coming election. Three aldermen will be chosen in place of George Fulton, George Peck and John Tobin, whose terms expire. The city will now elect three supervisors, a Justice of the Peace and a constable.

The annual meeting of the Fishermanden of Chicago will be held in the Auditorium Hotel, Saturday, March 31. Douglas Malloch will be toastmaster and Opie Reed will be one of the speakers. A number of Elkhorn sportsmen are members and will attend.

The recent storm has been the first to keep the Morrissey boys, from Antioch, Ill., where they were building a mansion for their mother. The time is not lost, however, for the whole gang has gone to work on the interior of Elkhorn's new schoolhouse.

Miss Ella Morrissey saleswoman of the Hoffman Dry Goods store has just entered upon her 25th year with the business. She began clerking for Mr. Hoffman, when she left high school 24 years ago.

Miss Nellie Murphy recently sold five lots fronting on N. Washington street, where the railroad cuts through a part of them, to Mrs. Margaret Leach. It is understood that the lots will be put on the market for residences.

Fred Brellenthin has moved to the Nelson residence, W. Jefferson street. He had been residing in the tenant house on L. W. Swan's farm, last of Elkhorn; but his position with Standard Oil Company, caused for quarters in town.

John Clegg and Violet Paul, both of Whitewater, have applied to the County Clerk, for a marriage license.

The tramp has become a real nonentity, so much so that one is seldom found in the Walworth county jail. Years ago, a storm period in March, like the 1922 storm, found 25 or more tramps quartered here. Only two applied to the court of Walworth, last week, and one of these arrived last Sunday and asked to wash his clothes and said he had heard of this jail out in Denver.

Literary Merit of the Bible

To those unaccustomed and to those who are narrow enough to have what they call a religious prejudice against it, the Bible means just a symbol of certain religion, and they pass it by as uninteresting reading.

These people do not pause to consider that all scholars and stylists, no matter what be their creed, study it from the standpoint of literary merit. No other book of our literature has had so much thought expended upon it by the Bible. Not to be a "Bible reader" stamps one as being distinctly negligent of educational advantages which are within reach of every hand.

One sect may call it mere sectarian history; another may consider it a divine inspiration, but no matter what the actual scope of its influence, it is a book for all thinkers and for those who desire mental culture. There are comparatively few Mohammedans and believers in the religion of the Chinese centuries old, still the best selected libraries contain copies of the Koran and of the writings of Confucius.

All readers want to use it for reference, if for nothing more, and this is true of the Bible in addition to its literary merit. There are hundreds of familiar quotations which off hand many will say are from Shakespeare, Milton, or Cervantes, when in reality they are from the Bible.

This is an unforgivable mistake which is possible, according to the distribution plan of this paper, to place the Bible within easy reach of all. See coupon on another page.

King Tut Doll

The latest development of Egyptian things is the King Tut Doll. It's built on the straight line plan, for speed, not beauty, and the women are crazy about it. It comes in many different colors and shows the influence of the recent Egyptian discoveries, in the body lines and upholstery designs.

That's the whole story on the newest fad—the King Tut Doll—just introduced by a group of musical comedy girls in New York. It's much the same as its predecessor, the Kiddi doll, with long dangling appendages, on a pen cil silhouette, "an inch and a half wide and a mile and a half long" only it adopted Egyptian headress and other pharaonic touches. And, of course, it's a gentleman doll instead of a lady.

CLINTON

Clinton—A brother of John Swartz and George Swartz, and Harry Leete, was brought from Elkhorn Thursday afternoon arriving on the 3 o'clock train. The body was taken to the home of John Swartz on the Milwaukee road and the funeral was held at 3 p. m. Friday.

The G. C. G. meeting which was to have met with Miss A. S. Parker Thursday afternoon, was called off because of the severity of the storm.

A large number of our ladies are interested in finishing sweaters sent out by the Bradley Knitting company of Delavan.

Mrs. Eleanor Thomas has mumps. Because of the storm, L. F. Eads did not make his usual trip to Sharon Thursday.

Mrs. Edwin Foley, who was called away by the illness of an aunt, returned home Wednesday evening.

ON MUSIC MEMORY LIST

Largo from New World Symphony by Anton Dvorak, Bohemian.

The "New World Symphony in E Major" is the fifth of the great Bohemian composer Dvorak and is the most popular of his greatest works.

Dvorak came to America in 1892 and made several tours in a Bohemian settlement in town. While in this country he became interested in Indian and Negro melodies and made a collection of them. After returning to his own country he wrote the "New World Symphony" commemorative of his stay here, and used in its construction several of these melodies.

The second movement in a Bohemian style.

TRIANGLE, CAUSE OF SAROW DIVORCE

Says Her Husband Left When She Objected to "Other Woman."

Testifying that her husband left when she objected to his keeping company with "another woman," Mrs. Ruth Sarow, Janeville former of Footville, was granted a divorce from Benjamin Sarow, Milwaukee and the custody of their only child by Judge George Grimm, in the Rock county circuit court, Friday.

Divorce was granted on grounds of failure to support, and Sarow was ordered to pay $40 a month for the support of the child and pay the $100 now due for five months' rent on the home. Sarow was ordered to pay $75 attorney fees and costs of the action, but had already advanced $125.

They were married at Magnolia, Jan. 28, 1912, and lived at Footville and Janeville. Sarow is 31 and his wife 26. Their sole child is Orville Frank, eight years old, whom the father was given the privilege of visiting.

520 Given Since Sept. 15.

Mrs. Sarow testified that Sarow gave her $20 about Sept. 15 but had given her nothing since and had in no other way contributed to her support and that Sarow had been giving some money from relatives. She said that he gave up a job here in July to go to Milwaukee where he was employed as a carpenter but was back for a few days.

"Have you kept your marriage leave?" was asked.

"No, I have not," said Mrs. Sarow.

"How you kept your marriage leave?"

"I have, as best I could," was the answer.

Mrs. Grace Hardling, an aunt of Mrs. Sarow, testified the latter had been forced to borrow money.

Sarow did not contest the divorce, but was in court with his attorney, E. D. McGowan, because an agreement as to alimony had not been reached.

Hesitates on Answers

He was called to the stand by Attorney Thomas Nolan, representing Mrs. Sarow. He testified his income was between $1,500 and $1,800 yearly, and that he had no other property, and was indebted to his sister for $1,000.

Asked why he had not paid the rent for six months, he hesitated, finally answering that he expected his wife to pay it because she was living there.

When the reason for his leaving his wife was brought up, the Milwaukee man was fidgety and showed an inclination to be silent but said that the trouble had been as Mrs. Sarow had testified, that she had accused him of going with another woman.

"I could give her only my word that I was not," said Mr. Sarow, "but she maintained that I was, so I lied."

Twenty-five spectators attended, mostly members of the First Christian church, where Mr. and Mrs. Sarow prior to their separation, were prominent in all activities.

Caged Animals, Clowns, Feature Big Indoor Circus

An indoor circus given by young people of the First Christian church, Friday night, was seen by a good-sized audience despite the unfavorable weather conditions.

Three side shows were open from 7:30 to 8:30. Miss Lillian Hensel was the smiling charm in charge of the approaching spring election, April 3. Every year Miss Sloan is responsible for the city election day, following sick people to vote but he points out that such applications this year must be made the day before.

"Any elector, who through nature of his or her business, will be absent from the city, or expects to be absent, or any who, on account of sickness or physical disability, will be unable to get to the polls on election day, may vote by making application for official ballot at the office of the city clerk," said Mr. Bartell. "Such application, when made by mail, must be made not later than three days before election, and if made in person, not later than one day before election.

No person can make application for one ballot after than 5 p.m. of the day before election.

"Applications must be made on the prescribed form as provided by law, and these are now obtainable at my office. The ballots are mailed to the applicants, postage prepaid, not later than three days before election. It is impossible for me to click off any voter who cannot attend the polls."

"Applications for ballots may be made now. In case of sickness or physical disability, a certificate of a duly licensed physician certifying to such sickness or disability, must be attached to the application. These certificate forms can be obtained at this office."

300 Enjoy Irish Frolic in New High School Gym

One of the most successful parties yet given in the new high school occurred in the gymnasium Friday night, when 300 members of the senior high school assembled for a St. Patrick's party. With a program of games, songs, stunts and musical numbers, it was the first party of this size that has been attempted in recent years without dancing as a diversion and proved a success.

Green, of course, the predominant color, both in the decorations and the costumes and paper curtains. TEST WILL COME WHEN CONGRESS IS ASKED FOR FUNDS

Second, to charter the vessels under the existing merchant marine act to private interests and afford them all the indirect aid possible to encourage them without any direct aid such as the ship subsidy bill itself provided.

Third, to continue government operation and ownership and call upon congress for substantial appropriations for new construction and to cover current expenses.

Broadly speaking, Mr. Harding is not the kind of a president who ignores congress, especially on major policies, and while he is disappointed over the failure of the ship subsidy bill, he is not surprised that congress has made up its mind to the proposed alternative and therefore he is not yet in a position to convey expression of congressional opinion than to ask for appropriations at the next session of congress. The president has said that a ship subsidy would cost less than the annual appropriations which congress has been making, but this argument has not seemed to drive away the desire of many members of the senate to hold on to the larger sum, but to keep the expenditure in government hands instead of giving it to private interests.

Congress, of course, having rejected the ship subsidy stands more or less committed to government operation for some time at least. The test will come when the executive asks for more money not only to cover current operating costs but to build a new fleet to replace some of the war fleet now wearing out and to construct new cargo carriers of the type which were not built during the war but which are essential for a well balanced merchant marine. This is a political era, at least, the ship subsidy bill failed through a filibuster in which many democrats participated.

A Democratic Hangover.

The shipping problem hasn't begun under a democratic administration so no matter how conscientiously the job might be done because it would be argued by the opponents of ship subsidy that the administration was endeavoring to accomplish by indirectation something which congress had flatly refused to sanction. The last alternative, namely, a continuation of government operation with request for a compact for appropriations to meet the losses as at present, is probably the most likely of all.

Not Ignoring Congress.

Mr. Harding is not the kind of a president who ignores congress, especially on major policies, and while he is disappointed over the failure of the ship subsidy bill, he is not surprised that congress has made up its mind to the proposed alternative and therefore he is not yet in a position to convey expression of congressional opinion than to ask for appropriations at the next session of congress. The president has said that a ship subsidy would cost less than the annual appropriations which congress has been making, but this argument has not seemed to drive away the desire of many members of the senate to hold on to the larger sum, but to keep the expenditure in government hands instead of giving it to private interests.

This is a political era, at least, the ship subsidy bill failed through a filibuster in which many democrats participated.

Criticism in Any Case.

Taking up each of the three courses of action, there are some disadvantages in all. For instance if the government were to sell the ships, but during the transition, then keep on chartering them, the administration would have to prepare to meet the criticism that it had disposed of the vessels at too low a figure or that it had liquidated business which it should have kept on operating even at a loss. The chartering of vessels to private interests of nominal rates, together with indirect aid, would in the opinion of many experts build up a merchant marine. But this, too, means a flood of criticism.

First Floor Plan

that the democrats are not likely to oppose a program of continued government operation while the republicans can point to the reduced costs of operation under the Lasker regime.

He is not sure, however, that any vote for all the necessary appropriations. So from the interests but the government would put as much enthusiasm into continuance of government operation as he was in favor of the subsidy plan and would continue to manage the fleet for the government as efficiently as possible.

THE BUSINESS OF FARMING—DAIRY—FARM BUREAU—LIVE STOCK

NEW BILL DRAFTED FOR AREA TESTING

Measure Calls for Re-test Within Two Years After First Test Made.

Livestock authorities in Wisconsin have unit on a tentative bill of legislation to carry on the program for eradicating bovine tuberculosis in the state stock. The bill calls for an appropriation of $1,000,000 declared necessary to carry through the testing program until every county is on the modified accredited list.

Several organizations including the Farm Bureau, breed organizations and the Wisconsin Livestock Breeders' association, it is said, have been lined up to favor the new measure. One provision is to the effect that unless otherwise permitted by the livestock sanitary board, no cattle shall be sold at any auction held in Wisconsin unless such cattle have successfully passed the tuberculin test within 60 days prior to the auction, and the reactors, if any, in such herds to be announced by the sales manager or auctioneer at the time of the sale.

Follow Up Tests

One other clause relates to the forfeiture of the right of any person to apply the bovine tuberculosis test who does not sterilize the testing needle and syringe before making a test and who does not tag and brand all reactors. Proof that the rules relating to the test as required by the sanitary board have been violated may result in the permit issued to test will be revoked.

Cattle breeders in Wisconsin have been concerned on the policy to be followed after the county-wide or area test, in which every head within a county is tested by the state and federal agents until each herd passes "clean." Under the proposed bill the state department is required to complete the initial test of all cattle in the state without expense to the owners within a reasonable length of time beginning July 1, 1923. Such tests to be made by counties as a unit, the livestock sanitary board assuming the right to give such preference to such counties which in its opinion produce the largest amount of milk consumed in fluid form.

Counties Will Help

Wisconsin breeders, especially those in counties already tested, have been concerned on the policy to be followed in re-testing to retain a clean bill of health on the herds. The proposed bill calls for re-tests at such intervals as the department of agriculture shall determine, but "not more than two years shall intervene between tests." Re-tests shall be continued until the percentage of tuberculous cattle within the county is reduced to a question of requirements for "modified accredited" as recommended by the U. S. Livestock Sanitary Board and approved by U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The re-tests, it is proposed, are to be conducted on a basis of counties in which the area test has been applied without expense to the cattle owners and in which there is a consequence of price indemnity. When a herd is found to approximate a sum sufficient, not to exceed 25 cents per head for each bovine animal recorded in such county by the assessor. Such retests are to be made under the supervision of the livestock sanitary board of Wisconsin.

10 Counties Waiting

"No herd shall be tested by an accredited veterinarian within three months of the time when a state test is made in any county," reads the measure.

There are now 10 counties, including Rock, lined up for the area test in Wisconsin. The demand for the test is rapidly increasing until it is a problem of how best to have all cattle in Wisconsin put under the needle with the state, federal governments, cooperating with the counties.

Six Blocked Roads

Six blocked roads have put a halt to practically all testing in Wisconsin. In Rock county alone there are 500 applications an acre from farmers desiring the test, regardless of whether the area test program is carried out through the passage of the proposed bill. No new herds will be tested until indemnity money is available, according to Dr. F. M. Lewis, Federal agent for the U. S. Livestock Sanitary Board and approved by U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The recent tests made in Rock county by Dr. Lewis there were 11 herds tested. But, three reactors found in two herds.

Southern Wisconsin

Southern Wisconsin counties will seek protection against importation of infected cattle from across the Illinois line. If it is alleged, there has been considerable violation of the law on interstate cattle. They are trucked across without the inter-state shipping test.

1,000,000 Fund

The total number of fully state and federal accredited in Rock county is expected to be more than 400 by the summer, even though the county-wide test is not applied. There are about 100 herds that are due for accrediting with one more clean test.

Apparently there are two phases to the legislation in Wisconsin affecting testing work to stamp out bovine tuberculosis. The proposed bill will carry $1,000,000 appropriation and put the cost of the first test on the state. The other phase is either to force a test with the cattle owners standing the loss, the radical reduction of indemnity amounts or part of the cost to be paid by the counties. Generally breeders are insistent that an adequate indemnity be paid by the state and U. S. government jointly at least for the first test.

It is apparent that the time is not far distant in Wisconsin that a "T. B." test will be required in every herd. The offer of the packers to pay at least 10 cent premium on swine from accredited counties is having considerable bearing on the cost of the test. Breeders are agreed on the need of retaining the accredited herd plan of getting cattle clean—and then keeping the herds clean.

ROUND WORM CAUSES HEAVY LOSSES ON SWINE FARM HERE

By R. T. GLASSCO

Round worms in pigs are taking an excessive toll of the profits of farms in Rock county.

It is disheartening to visit farmers in the early summer and see thumpy, unthrifty pigs. These pigs never fatten economically. Being stunted early in their lives they are unprofitable.

Round worms in pigs can be easily controlled by thoroughly washing the farrowing pen with lye and boiling water. Boiling water kills the eggs of the round worm. The lye is to make the job more thorough. It has been found that the eggs of the round worm will live in a saturated solution of bi-chloride of mercury which will also live in a solution of two per cent formaldehyde. It can easily be seen that the eggs are very hardy and that they will live indefinitely. After the farrowing pen is thoroughly washed out, the sows should be carefully washed with warm water and soap.

The pens and sows should be kept in the farrowing pen until such a time as they can be turned out into a lot free from round worm eggs. It is just as necessary to rotate the pigs lot with its usual box hollow as infested with the round worm eggs. If either the sow or the pig get in the mud from these lots, they are sure to be infested.

After the pigs are six or eight weeks of age, they are not so easily infected with round worms as they have more resisting power and they escape the more or less fatal living stage of the round worm which is mostly the cause of tramp.

In preparation for exhibition it has been found that pigs infected with worms make about half an economic gain as pigs not infected. Any farmer considering entering the Ton Litter Contest of Rock County should be certain that his pigs are not infected with worms.

WORLD'S BUTTER RECORD

Vancouver, B. C.—Agassiz Seeds May Echo, a five-year-old Holstein owned by the Dominion Experimental farm at Agassiz, B. C., has established a world's record in butter production according to the announcement of W. H. Hicks, superintendent of the farm.

This queen of dairy animals, Mr. Hicks said, has, in 365 days produced 39,888 pounds of milk, averaging more than 4 percent butter fat and yielding 1,881 pounds of butter. "This," said Mr. Hicks, "is twenty-four pounds of butter more than that produced in the same period by the previous world's record holder, Bella Postlach of Brantford, Ont.

Average Production of Cows Shows Why All Dairying Not Profitable.

Rock county needs more cow testing associations. Farmers who complain that dairying is not profitable should first consider whether they have cows that will return a profit even under the best conditions and secondly whether they are feeding along lines to enable their herd to produce the maximum amount of milk and fat. The average production is not profitable.

Declaring that he will not taste food until he is granted a retrial, Nicola Sacco is slowly starving himself to death, aliments for him and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, convicted with him, argue for a retrial of the men at Dedham, Mass. The men were convicted of killing a paymaster. Reds and other radical organizations threatened attacks on American embassies and consulates if the men were convicted.

For many years French militiamen and industrialists have cast covetous eyes on the famous and gigantic Krupp works at Essen, Germany. When the occupation of the Ruhr was accomplished the French took possession of Essen. That was easy. But it has been another matter to make the famous plant produce equipment at normal capacity under direction of French experts. The work has been hampered by strikes and "passive resistance" by the workers.
